

What is the one thing
we've learned in golf design?
The game is supposed to be fun.
So, that is where we begin.

THE RICHARDSON HILLS COURSE AT PROMONTORY

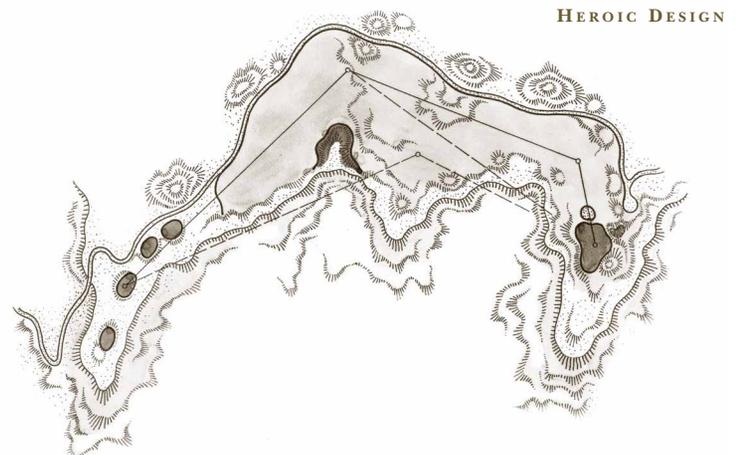

BAYLANDS GOLF LINKS | A YOUNG FORREST RICHARDSON WITH A SCALE MODEL OF PAPAGO GC

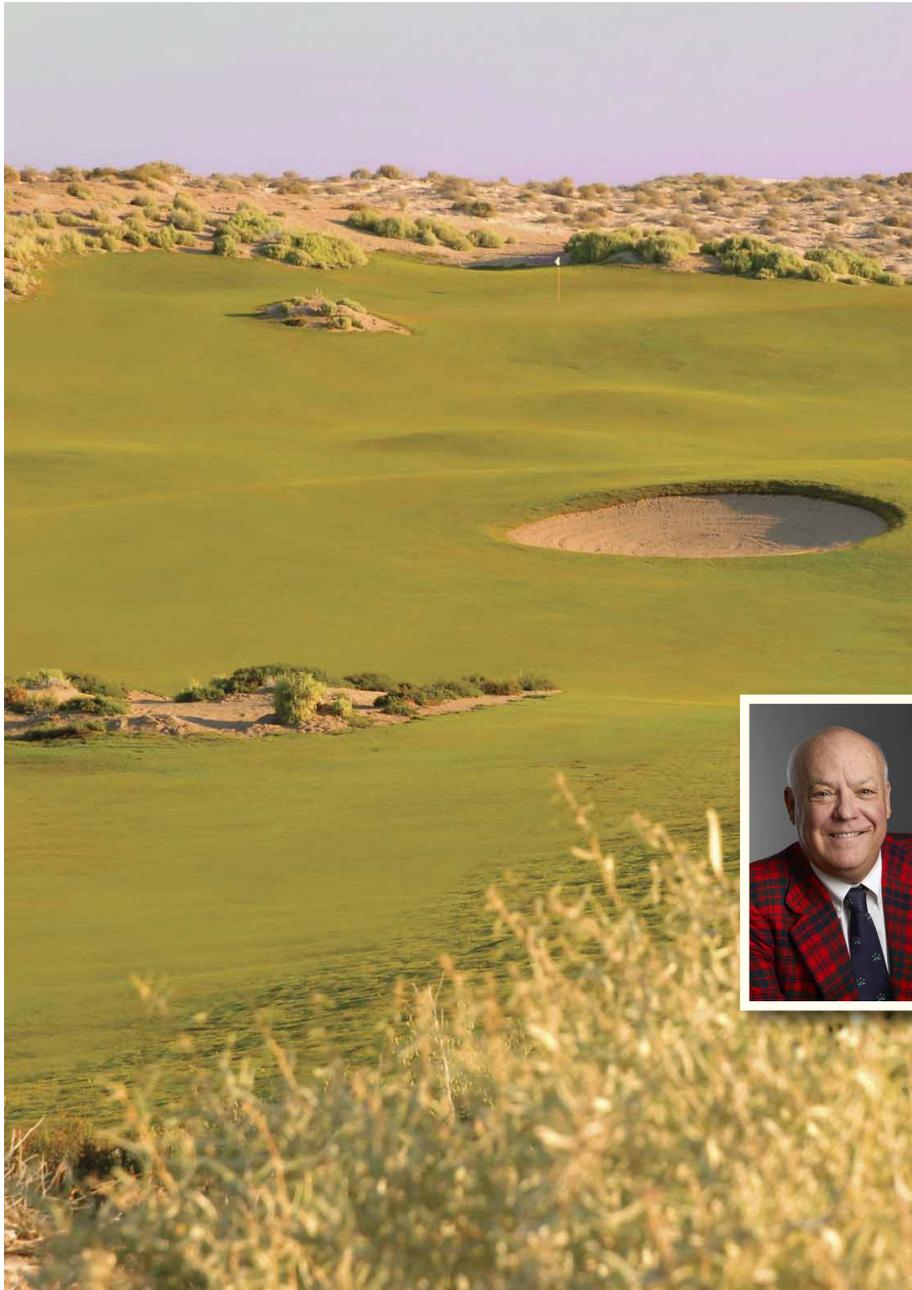

Forrest Richardson began designing and building golf courses in his backyard. One of his earliest creations was Rolling Rocks, a desert layout with natural arroyos and tin can cups. The joy of realizing your childhood dreams doesn't happen all that often. Forrest is fortunate.

Today, Forrest Richardson brings a rich and diverse combination of experiences to the table on behalf of clients throughout the world. Each project is treated with creativity, detail and passion. With results praised and awarded — but mostly enjoyed.

BERKELEY COUNTRY CLUB

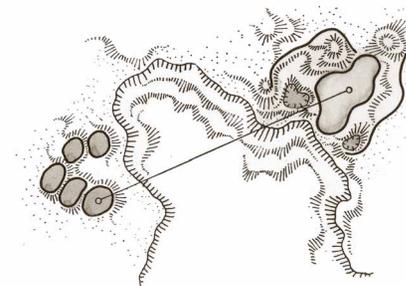

LINKS AT LAS PALOMAS | FORREST RICHARDSON, 75TH PRESIDENT OF THE ASGCA

Our lineage begins with Henry Fownes, founder of America's iconic Oakmont Country Club.

In 1907 a young Arthur Snyder began caddying for Fownes, eventually joining the grounds crew to build many of Oakmont's famous bunkers. Arthur's son, Jack Snyder, studied landscape architecture, becoming the 38th member of the American Society of Golf Course Architects. Jack was Forrest's mentor.

Today we draw from the innovation of Fownes, yet with an eye toward the future. Forrest became the 200th member of ASGCA and eventually served as its 75th President.

OLIVAS LINKS | FORREST RICHARDSON APPEARING ON GOLF CHANNEL

If there were one goal of any golf project, it should be to be sustainable. Environmentally, of course. Financially, a must. But, to beckon the player back again and again — that is the ultimate.

These hallmarks are represented at each and every turn. We understand ROI — we think like owners. We embrace the notion to use less resources — not more. And, we never shy away from making sure the golf experience is fun, thought-provoking and challenging.

DETOUR DESIGN

“It immediately vaults into the conversation among the best in the Bay Area, thanks to architect Forrest Richardson’s deft touch and vision...Baylands is the best game in town.”

GOLF CHANNEL

LINKS AT LAS PALOMAS

“Richardson has succeeded in designing a course accessible to all levels of skill...Where the desert meets the sea are blow-outs of sand carved out by wind and held in place by native grasses...a true links golf course.”

JETSETTER MAGAZINE — ON THE LINKS AT LAS PALOMAS

“Fun and challenging — the mark of intelligent design... Could it be a model for the direction in which golf should be headed?”

LINKS MAGAZINE — ON MOUNTAIN SHADOWS

BERKELEY COUNTRY CLUB

“Our gratitude and appreciation for the wonderful transformation your restoration has brought to Berkeley Country Club. Your expertise has brought character, artistry, and a renewed standard of excellence to a classic course that will be played with pride by our members for years to come. Many thanks for helping us realize our vision and preserving Robert Hunter’s legacy.”

BERKELEY COUNTRY CLUB BOARD OF DIRECTORS (JUNE 2012)

“The new course requires us to play more for position and accuracy, and asks us to think rather than just hit the ball as far as we could.”

Forrest Richardson Golf Course Architects blends traditional values with innovative approaches. That is what defines our work. Whether the mission is reimagining a course, renovating or building something new, the overriding goal is to create something special — while always appreciating that what gets created needs to be timely and with purpose.

Simply put, we understand the perspectives and goals of owners, members and players. Golf design is a complex puzzle. Only with a strong belief in the words here does the puzzle truly get solved.
